PN on the BP gas deal and the missing pipeline

The Opposition's statement of 22 June 2026, tested against Enemalta and the promoter

THE CLAIM

"The Labour Government had promised that by this year Malta would have a pipeline for gas supply … it has failed."

Partit Nazzjonalista, statement, 22 June 2026

The BP agreement "will cover only nine months", "without providing any details about the price".

The contract facts hold and the pipeline is unbuilt; the dated promise "by this year" could not be found.

VERDICT

NOT SUBSTANTIATED

Contract facts hold; dated promise not shown.

SUPPORTED | LARGELY SUPPORTED | NOT SUBSTANTIATED | MISLEADING | CONTRADICTED

MAIN RESULTS

9.6 mo

BP supply after SOCAR ends

13 Aug 2026 to end of May 2027 (291 days); 11.3 months from the 21 Jun announcement.

0

Prices published

No price or volume; Enemalta did say it is linked to the TTF gas index.

2030

Pipeline start-up (indicative)

On the promoter's page, updated Dec 2022; construction start 2028.

0

Statements found dating it to 2026

Earlier targets of 2024 and 2025 are second-hand; none read in the original.

2022

PN also proposed a pipeline

Its 2022 programme pledged a gas pipeline to Sicily (our summary).

FAIR TO SAY

Labour's 2017 manifesto reportedly pledged the pipeline and its 2026 manifesto still lists it, so it is late against every date we found. We did not read the earlier manifestos in the original, so the missing 2026 date is a gap in our search, not proof.

WHAT WOULD SETTLE IT

- ☐ The Labour or Government statement that dated the pipeline to 2026.
- ☐ The start date of BP supply and any publishable price.
